

This is very focused, but you really need to work on run-on Homework and Teachers sentences.

No offence to teachers, they do work hard but, I hate two things in school ⁽¹⁾ teachers and homework. I have no idea why there is homework, I spend six to eight whole hours in school 5 days a week and when I get home I am beat so what is the point of just piling a bunch of work on us when there must be time for us to relax? Every single day I have about 11 hours of school because I have so much homework that I must do before anything else I want to do. I wanna play basketball when I get better but I cant because I have 3 pound of homework to do most of the time. Sometimes the reason that I hate teachers is because they give so much homework I don't even want to go to school the next day because I know that I wont have enough time to do my homework at home. When teachers say that they also have homework but aren't they getting paid for doing their homework and all we are getting from it is less sleep and more of a head ache. If I got money for doing homework but there is nothing that drives us to do our homework like teachers have money but we don't have anything. Some student say that they do have no problem with homework and in my opinion they really have problems because some of the stuff in school we don't even need to know like some history like Greek gods, again no offense to any one but I don't even want to learn about that. When I hear the sentence "and your homework for today is..." I have such a bad feeling in my stomach because I will have to sort out my schedule very fast because I need to make time for what what I need to do and what I don't need to do. Last year I couldn' go to basketball practice sometimes because of homework and it drove one of my friends to quit the team. Sometimes homework can help us but it makes us give up things that are very important to us which in my opinion those things are what keep us happy.