

very focused. good job, Gerald.
great topic, too.

Your first # needs lots of details, though

October 15, 2006

Dali

The Government's True Actions and Decisions

details

The government in my opinion doesn't make the best decisions. I feel their decisions aren't taken into thought, as they should be. I ^{think} feel because they are the government they feel they have a power above a lot of other people. Therefore they feel they have the power to make decisions that aren't the best. Even looking at a picture of the war in Iraq would be an example of my opinion and would be able to back it up. That would just show another countless and careless decision made by the government.

Spelling

don't skip

To give even more background information on the government's countless decisions you would have to think about the United States condition now. You would also have to think about the law and what you are able and unable to do. For instance: the ban against gay marriage in certain states, the ignorance being given towards global warming and natural disasters, and the infamous war in Iraq. Now some of these epidemics that are going on may not be the governments yet at the same time the government isn't doing anything to try and stop them. Given that there aren't any plans for the future to solve some of these problems I feel it doesn't do anything but make my point stronger. ✓

good Example

don't skip

Now that I'm older I can witness the issues are that taking place and how they aren't being fixed. I also have realized that these problems (if not taking care of) could ^{affect me} be affecting all the way to my adult hood (especially global warming). The government isn't enforcing the public to cut down on the pollution, therefore global warming continues and becomes a bigger problem. Soon this epidemic will become ^{danger} dangerous. Being American citizens and knowing what rules and laws I dangerous!

have to follow I would like to trust in the people who give them. I feel the problems taking place should soon but surely be taken care of. It's mainly up to the government to make this happen but it should be taken care of before it's too late.