

October 10, 2006

Humanities

this is very focused, but random. Next time, have some sort of reflection that explains why this is meaningful or important to you.

Entry #1: Dreams

Why do we have dreams? I've always wondered why we dream, and if they are supposed to mean something. I never have what I call a "normal" dream they either never finish or something really crazy happens. I usually wake up when somebody is getting ready to say something. One night a couple of weeks ago I had a dream about my great grandmother. My great grandmother died over the summer, and all of us from New York went down to Mississippi for the funeral. In my dream we pulled up to this big mansion in the country in Mississippi. I remember asking my mom what were we doing at this mansion, since no one in our family is that rich. She said that we went to grandma's house and a note was on the door. The note said to drive down the pasture until we saw this big white house, which was the mansion. When we got to the house everybody got out of their cars and I knocked on the door. When I knocked on the door my great grandmother opened the door. When she lead us into this all white house everyone started looking around. I asked her how did she get here and she just stared at me. I asked her again and she says that my she said that her land was sold by one of her kids and she kept the money. Then out of nowhere she says "I'm BALLIN'!" in her old lady voice. When I asked her who sold the land I woke up. When ever I dream this always happens to me. When I want to find something out in my dreams I always wake up. This aggravates me so much, but it still makes me wonder if our dreams are meant to mean something. I guess I will never find out.